

Story of an old town, with reminiscences of early Nebraska and biographies of pioneers (1902)

A Narrative of Truth Describing the Birth of Nebraska, and Its Progress, of Its Oldest Towns, and Its First Settlers. INTRODUCTION. This work as now presented to the public has been arduous and painstaking, its object being to array a set of facts without deviation from the truth, portraying a part of the early history of Nebraska and its inhabitants. The task has been laborious as well as tedious, commanding the most minute research and consuming many years. To Robert W. Furnas, Geo. W. Doane, Capt. Silas T. Learning, Henry Fontenelle, A. B. Fuller, Christopher C. Dunn, Dr. J. B. Whittier, John Lewis, James Ashley, and a host of others, the author is deeply indebted for the valuable assistance rendered. Without their co-operation the work would have been impossible. Entering Nebraska as a vast wilderness we leave it as one of the prosperous states of the union; certainly a most wonderful transformation. In picturing this great change we not only present general characteristics but personal, thereby making it of interest to the individual as well as the public. The author is positive in his statement that within this book historical events will be found of our state that no other book of like kind contains. In fact on this point he has been exceedingly cautious; an avoidance of repetition. In the presentment of dates, they have not been used unless verified; and his greatest enjoyment to record something which other writers have left undone or overlooked. This work is not copious nor complete, but what has been said, is simple, truthful and instructive, and upon perusal the readers will have at their tongues end a graphic and concise history of the state. No embellishments have been attempted, and all events treated abruptly, keeping but one vital point in constant view the truth. Hoping the work will meet with the approval of the public and earn for itself at least a little merit, the author
