Not illustrated. 1892 edition. Excerpt: ...a serpent. Chairs in the garden to let, 2 sous. The Pal-a-tine Hili (tine or teen), Rome. Upon this hill stood the Oppidum or fortress of the ancient Pelasgi; and here Evander welcomed _33neas. And when iEneas established his new city, this hill was included within its boundaries. The northern portion was reserved for the temples of the gods and for the residence of the kings, and in later times of the aristocracy. It was never occupied by the plebeians. Here Romulus and Remus were brought up by Faustulus, the shepherd; Augustus was born; the Gracchi, Catulus, Marius, Octavius, Erail. Scaurus, Clodius, Cicero, Marc Antony, Drusus, and Crassus had their homes; and Augustus, Tiberius, Caligula, Commodus, Domitian, Nero, Vespasian, and Sept. Severus had their palaces on the Palatine Hill. The Palace of Augustus (21), the first erected, was on the s. w. part of the hill, where the Villa Mills now stands, and westward. In the sacking of the city by Genseric, A.d. 450, the palaces suffered irreparable injury. In 003, the palace of Vespasian was occupied by Emp. Constaus, and it is probable that it continued habitable for a century afterward. At length it fell into entire ruin, and the whole became se covered with debris that for centuries little was to be seen except here and there some nameless ruin, till at last all knowledge of the buildings and localities oa the Palatine was lost. Since 1840 extensive excavations have been made, and many localities uncovered, and their structures and rooms identified. Plan Of The Palatine Hill. 1. Entrance from the Fo-i. Tablinium. 15.
