Short biographies of 50 selected painters from 15th to 20th century, including fun facts and quotes. The book 50 painters tries to give clues of the painters inner world through the help of their art. At the same time, expects to be a source of inspiration by giving certain details and important events that shaped their lives. However intensely lived, the lives of these painters, apart from their art, are usually so simply beautiful or sometimes sad that they can be fit just into one paragraph. Either the story of Mary Cassatt who struggled for her passion despite all handicaps she had, or the decisiveness of Gaugin who rejected a banking career after the age of forty, or the energy that forced Bouguereau paint from the early morning until nightfall, can be inspirational guides and clues for our own lives. The painters in this book were successful at creating art and the success can be gained not only with talent but with passion, feverish study and most important of all with emotion. As Paul Cezanne said: A work of art which did not begin in emotion is not art.
